New Exhibits Are Entered for Fair

Game Commission To Have Exhibit At Annual Show

State Wild Life Exhibit Is Shown Here for First Time.

MANY NEW EXHIBITS

Restrict Private Booths To Make Room for New Displays.

Entries continue to pour into headquarters of the Southwest Arkansas Fair and all indications now point to a splendid array of exhibits in all departments. The fair management is expecting the greatest volume of exhibits ever seen at a fair in this section of the state and are providing additional facilities for handling them. The management has found it necessary to reduce the number of commercial booths this year in order to handle the educational and agricultural exhibits.

One of the many new educational features to be seen at the fair this year will be an exhibit entered by the Arkansas Fish and Game Commission of Little Rock. This exhibit will contain specimens of the wild animals found in Arkansas, many varieties of fish found in our streams, several varieties of pheasants and other wild life. This will be the most elaborate exhibit of its kind ever seen in this section of the state and will occupy one entire building. The exhibit will be under the supervision of Earl Barham, local game warden.

Another new educational feature will be a forestry exhibit entered by the United States Department of Agriculture. The purpose of this (Continued on Page Three)

Per Capita Fund Shows Decline

School Fund This Year To Be 28c Per Pupil Less Than 1928

The appointment was made prior to the meeting of the state board which will apportion the amounts due to the several counties. The total amount for the schools will be $2,308,403.03.

The amount available now is $164,268.47 less than on Sept. 11, 1928. The board will meet this afternoon to make the appropriation.

Meet Friday for Plans To Import Pure-Bred Bulls

Hempstead Farmers Invited to Supper By Business Men

TO IMPROVE HERDS

High-Priced Sires Would Be Placed in Every Community

Plans for the organization of pure-bred bull clubs all over Hempstead county, in support of this county's dairying program, will be discussed at a supper meeting of Hempstead farmers at 7:30 o'clock Friday night at the Capital hotel.

Hope business men will sponsor and pay for the supper, in the same manner as the meeting held last June when Mr. McClain of the U. S. Department of Agriculture addressed a record crowd here.

Each business man is inviting two farmers as his guests for the evening.

The aim of the meeting is to explain the bull association idea and sell the key men of each community on the plan to organize enough pure-bred bull clubs to build up the calibre of dairy herds all over the county. Exactly how these clubs are to be organized, and the experiences of farmers in other states, will be described at the meeting after supper.

It is planned to import a carload of high-priced young bulls, not only registered but pedigreed, in an effort to lift milk-production in this county to several times its present volume. By distributing the cost of each community bull among a score or more of farmers who live in that particular section, it is believed that the entire project can be financed with one effort. Co-operative ventures of a similar nature have been successful almost everywhere.

Although Hempstead county is not yet tick free, many localities dip their herds, and young bulls imported in several instances have not suffered from tick fever. The county is expected to be made tick-free before another summer.

Hope's 140-pound watermelon which went to the Federal Farm Board as a gift last week, found an old acquaintance in one of the members of the board.

And what is more, the old acquaintance remembered Hope.

C. B. Denman, president of the Livestock Growers' association, a St. Louis co-operative, was one of the men appointed by President Hoover to serve with Alexander Legge on the Federal Farm Board.

Nine years ago Mr. Denman knew Hope, Arkansas, and Homer Pigg, now secretary of Hope Chamber of Commerce, because of the live-stock shipped to the new St. Louis co-op from this city.

Two Are Held for Theft of Cotton

Complaint of Cotton Raid Near Patmos Produces Arrests

Charged with stealing cotton from county farmers and selling it in the seed at Garrett's gin here for six cents a pound, Reed Tarter and Lora Norwell, brothers-in-law aged about 22, of near Patmos, were arrested and jailed today by Hempstead and Nevada county officials.

Tarter was held in jail in Hope, while Sheriff Weaver of Nevada county detained Norwell at Prescott on orders from this city.

Deputy Constable J. E. Bearden, who was assisted in the investigation of complaints of cotton thefts in lower Hempstead county by Deputy Sheriffs Lawallen and Purtle, said Tarter made a written confession in the local jail this morning.

The confession, according to Constable Bearden, alleged that Tarter and Norwell were partners, raiding cotton fields at night and hauling the cotton to town in a car in 300-pound lots and selling it at the local gin.

The complaint was made two weeks ago and officers have been investigating it ever since.

Friends Worried Over Mr. Johnson's Condition

A. L. Johnson of the firm of Johnson, Billingsley and Riggsdill here, is not responding to treatment as rapidly as it was hoped he would after going to a hospital in Cleveland, O., and friends here are becoming worried for his safety.

For a time after his arrival there he was a great deal better and belief was expressed that he would soon recover. However, the improvement was only temporary and advice to friends here indicates that he is not responding to treatment as his physicians hoped and his condition is regarded as serious.

Legion Ready To Throw Real Party

"Feed Detail" Reports To Commander Hamm "All Jake."

The "feed detail" named by Post Commander Barney Hamm to look after Wednesday night's Legion party at the armory, report that everything is set—the beans, "slum" and prunes ready to go on the range in the field kitchen Wednesday noon with "corn Willie" coming up later.

The party is being pitched by Mr. Hamm, Dewey Hendricks, Roy Allen and Ira Halliburton, hoping to bribe the gang not to put them into office again. However, that seems something of a forlorn hope as when that feed is spread, if it is as good as is hoped for, you couldn't stir up opposition to one of them with a stick.

Principal order of business for the evening, outside re-electing the gang to serve for another year, will be choosing a delegate to the National Convention. There are several Legionnaires qualified to fill in for the occasion and one of them is going to go or get a drum-head court-martial to pass on his case.

Major Cone Home From Air Races

Arkansas Man Wins Honors With Command-Aire In National Meet.

After winning second place in the Class B division of the Miami-to-Cleveland air derby, third place in the Cleveland-Toronto race and nosing out in second place in the Australian pursuit race at Cleveland, Maj. J. Carroll Cone landed his Challenger motorized Command-Aire plane at the local airport Sunday night loaded with trophies and covered with laurels.

Major Cone, who is an official of Command-Aire, Inc., and commanding officer of the 15th Observation Squadron, Arkansas National Guard left Little Rock August 21, and while he was away he participated in all the national air races in connection with the meeting of the National Aeronautics Association. In addition to trophies, he also won $1,700 in cash prizes.

Miss Ruth Nichols, noted woman flier, won first place in the Cleveland-to-Pittsburgh women's derby in Major Cone's plane, thus adding to the distinction of the product of Little Rock's airplane factory.

The Command-Aire plane was the only Class B stock ship in the Miami-to-Cleveland race, the one in which Major Cone won second place. All the other planes were built especially for racing.

Major Cone flew to Little Rock Sunday from Erie, Pa. He landed here in the dark Sunday night without difficulty, aided by his thorough knowledge of the local flying field and the surrounding country.

Bodcaw Fair Will Be Staged Friday; Many To Attend

Third Annual Event Expected To Be Best In Lower Nevada County

HOPE AIDS BODCAW

This City and Prescott Show Keen Interest In Community Event

The third annual Bodcaw Community Fair will be held at Bodcaw, southern Nevada county, this Friday.

The Fair catalogue, copies of which have been distributed over both Hempstead and Nevada counties, shows that 12 of the 22 advertisements were placed by Hope business houses. Bodcaw has always been closely associated with Hope, and this year's Community Fair will draw a large attendance from Hope and the eastern part of Hempstead county.

Bodcaw is giving the Fair united support, and Prescott business houses have also contributed heavily to the success of the annual agricultural and home economics show.

Excellent exhibits of poultry, home canning and field crops are always shown at the Bodcaw Fair; and this year the interest is running higher than ever, according to Fair officials.

The executives in charge of the 1929 Fair are as follows:

Dr. J. P. Atkinson, president; W. M. Grain, vice-president; H. S. Herring, secretary; T. B. Boswell, treasurer.

Fire Threatens West Coast Field

Ventura Oil Region Is In Path of Flames—Men Fight to Stay Advance

VENTURA, Cal., Sept. 17.—(AP)—A roaring line of fire swept down the southwest slope of a Sulphur mountain and advanced within six miles of the rich Ventura Avenue oil field today, despite the efforts of several hundred fire fighters to hold it in check.

Conscription of men over a radius of 50 miles was started and a fleet of trucks has been assigned to strategic points to rush them to the fire lines. Appeals were sent to Fillmore, Ventura, Ajai and other towns in the district for help.

The flames pushed forward on a two-mile front after laying waste a 15-mile strip reaching from a point four miles north of Santa Paula almost to the Ventura Avenue line.

Twenty derricks scattered through the hills fringing the Santa Clara river valley were burned.

Tom Lopes, driving a car down Sulphur mountain pass ran head-on into the wall of fire and was seriously burned. Roy and Paul Costello, oil company employees, escaped death by crawling under the bodies of two automobiles and allowing the flames to jump over them. They reported that rabbits and rats which had taken refuge with them were overcome with the heat.

In Final Report Urges Next Jury To Continue Work

SCORE TWO SESSIONS

Investigating Body Says Last Two Sessions Need Investigating

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Terming conditions in the last two legislatures as "deplorable," the Pulaski county grand jury in its final report for the March term today recommended that the investigation of legislative matters be continued by the grand jury which convenes for the September term next Monday.

The report was made today to Judge Abner McGehee, of the first division Circuit court, and covered the grand jury's investigations into charges of attempted bribery in connection with the passage of a racing bill at the last session for which two indictments have been returned, one against Reece A. Caudle, member of the Arkansas railroad commission and the other against an unnamed Memphis man. (Continued on Page Three)

Blevins To Be In For Prizes Again

Last Year's Winner Will Try To Repeat At This Year's Fair

Blevins at the 1928 Southwest Arkansas Fair took first honors in a walk, sweeping everything in the line of community at the Fair, and this year they plan repeating.

This much was assured last night when Roy Anderson, W. Homer Pigg, Lynn Smith and Miss Mary Buchley visited the little city and discussed the advisability of an exhibit. "It won't really be a fair unless you folks are in it," Mr. Anderson told them, for you've been in every fair we ever had. You just can't quit us now."

Blevins folks have been busy, they explained, and that was why they had overlooked preparing their community exhibit, but now they think of it the exhibit will be coming up.

"Blevins is one of the most patriotic communities in Arkansas," Mr. Smith told Star today. "They work together in anything and everything for the betterment of their community. If Bill Smith starts anything, Tom Jones and the rest of the country fall in and help put it over. There's more real unity of effort right there in that little town than any place I know. They may not win first prize at the fair this year, but you may know one thing and that is that Blevins will have a creditable exhibit."

Negroes Demand Primary Vote Right

Seek Court Order To Allow Participation In Primaries.

The mass meeting of negro citizens of Little Rock Sunday to make plans and raise money to carry to the higher courts the question of the right of negroes to vote in Democratic primaries in Arkansas was attended by more than 300. The session was called by the Colored Citizens Defense Fund committee and was held at the Mosiac temple.

An injunction was granted last fall by Judge Richard M. Mann of the second division circuit court prohibiting interference with negro voters at the polls. The order was dissolved by Chancellor Frank H. Dodge of the Pulaski chancery court August 29.

About $150 was raised at the meeting, it was announced, and the principal speakers were: Dr. J. M. Robinson, leading negro Democrat in Arkansas, and the Rev. George Gilbert Walker, negro Episcopal minister. The body also has retained the negro law firm of Scipio A. Jones, Booker & Booker and John A. Hibble to carry the case up.

The Civil Sabbath

DR. W. A. BOWEN, pastor of the First Baptist church, made an eminently fair reply in the pulpit of his church last Sunday, to certain arguments that have been raised in this community regarding Sunday amusements.

The pastor hit the nail on the head when he distinguished between the Sabbath as a religious day, on the calendar of the churches, and a civil institution, prescribed by law. "The American Sunday," he said, "is a civil institution. All the states have laws relating to the day. The state does not recognize the religious character of the day, as such, but enforces its observance on the theory that one day of rest is necessary for the physical and moral well-being of its citizens."

This newspaper observes the six-day week, and newspapers which publish seven days a week invariably arrange to let employees who work on Sunday, rest some other day in the week. Every newspaper publishing a Sunday or Monday morning edition infringes on the divine Sabbath, but concedes the seventh-day rest demanded by the civil Sabbath. This is merely one of the many contradictions brought up by modern-day life.

Another contradiction is apparent in the field of transportation and amusement. There is no necessary motoring on Sunday, except for physicians and others in public service. Theatres and baseball are not necessary on the Sabbath—and yet the majority of Americans live under a civil Sabbath which permits these things, not as labor in the Biblical meaning, but as a recreational relief to the masses at the end of a working week.

The desire for these things among the people of a state like Arkansas, where the divine and civil Sabbaths coincide, becomes an issue only when the public press is convinced that there is serious dissatisfaction.

We do not say that there is positive proof of serious dissatisfaction here in the city of Hope. This is our first comment on the recent straw vote staged on Sunday amusements by The Star. That vote showed sentiment to be apparently two and a half to one in favor of a more liberal civil Sabbath, but it is our opinion as a newspaper editor that the actual sentiment is about evenly divided.

Because we staged our straw vote there will doubtless be many people who can "place" us with respect to the controversy. They will put The Star down as simply favoring Sunday entertainment, regardless of the churches. They are dead wrong. None of the employees of The Star, or members of employees' families, were permitted to vote. The Star neither favors nor opposes Sunday amusements. We will never make a recommendation to the people of Hope on that question.

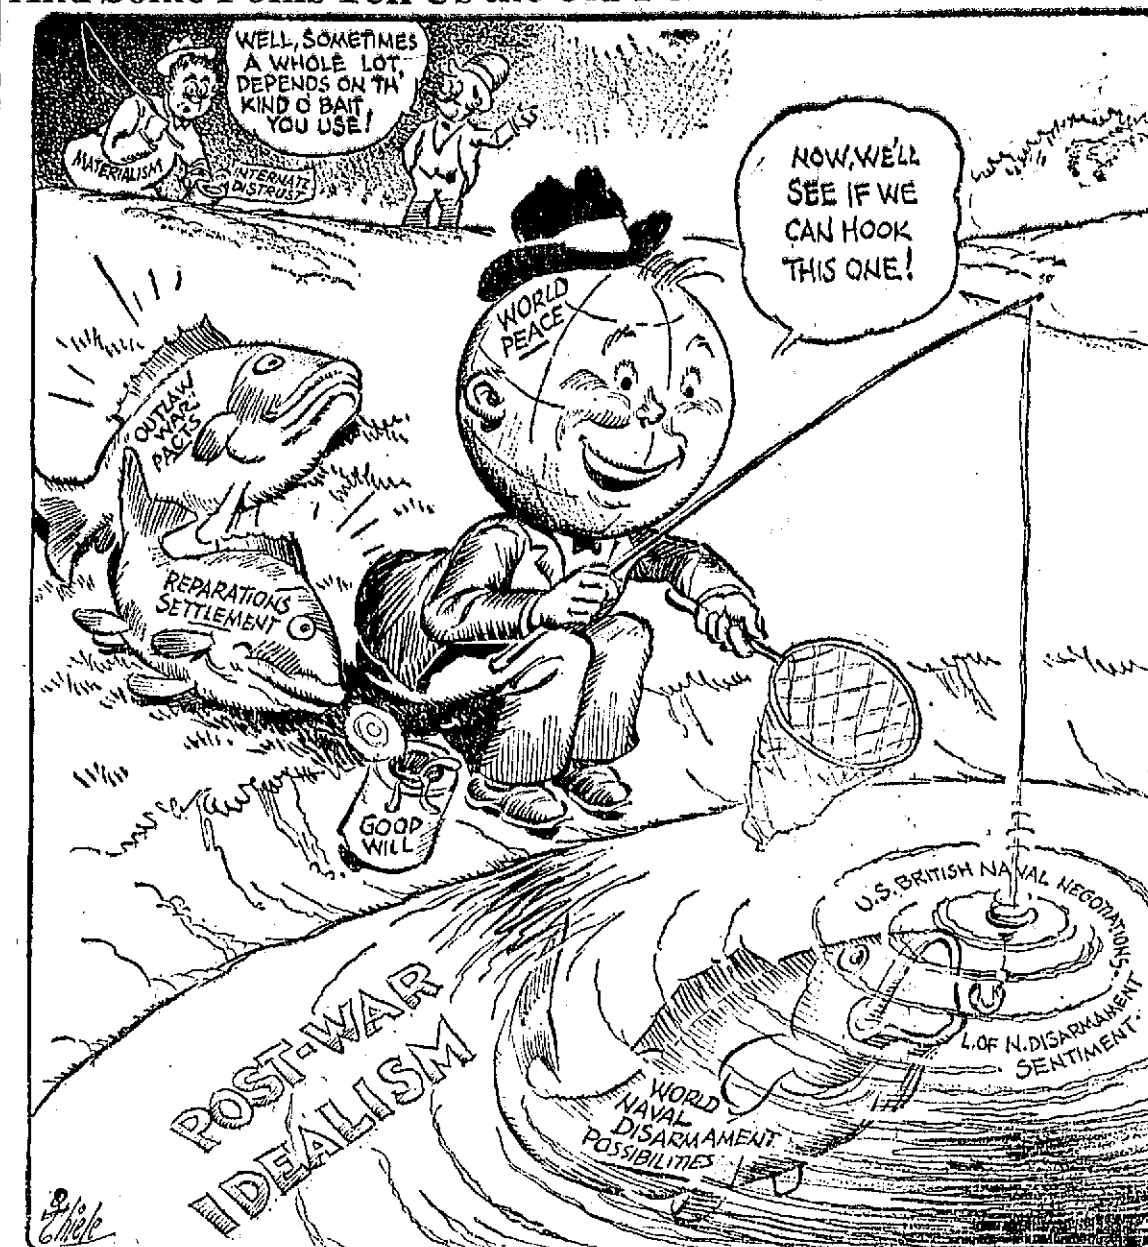

But there is a legal problem invoked by disobedience to the present Arkansas law governing the civil Sabbath. The law were better amended so that each community might settle the question to its own liking. We said in our September 9th issue that "The Star has no interest in whether the people of this city vote for or against Sunday amusements. But we are interested in an amendment to the law which will give them the chance to vote on it."

The Associated Press

IN the preamble to its roll call of 1,250 member newspapers, dated August 15, 1929, The Associated Press restates the aim and object of every good and worth-while public journal:

"The membership of The Associated Press includes persons of every conceivable political, economic and religious advocacy. The one thing upon which they are united, so far as The Associated Press news service is concerned, is that it shall be wholly free from partisan activity, or even the expression of any opinion whatever. The service is intended to be limited to the reporting of events without bias. To this end the news service is intentionally and necessarily subjected to the criticism of its fifteen directors, its 1,250 members and indeed the reading public. It is the theory of the organization that, in a self-governing country like ours, the citizens, if given the facts, must be able to form their own opinions respecting them."

And Some Folks Tell Us the Old Pond Has Been Fished Out!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—The effectiveness and extent of organized dry propaganda or education in schools, colleges, newspapers and churches, and as used in last year's presidential campaign, is outlined in the recently published Anti-Saloon League Year Book for 1929.

Whether you call it propaganda or education, here is one of the main explanations of dry superiority. Lately the wets have been trying, through careful research and dignified factual citations, to offset some of it. But it is doubtful whether they can ever find such large and ready-made markets for their propaganda as the dries have in the churches and the schools.

Last year the Anti-Saloon League publishing house printed 5,991,650 pamphlets and leaflets, 3,780,097 copies of the American Issue—the principal dry publication—536,355 copies of other prohibition periodicals, 1,540,885 letter-heads and envelopes, 44,250 books and 1,615,998 charts, posters, window cards and miscellaneous items.

It Was A Big Year
 The Year Book figures show that all this was the equivalent of 206,392,000 book pages. Of course, it was a campaign year and the Democratic candidate was officially regarded by the dry organizations as the "candidate of the liquor interests." So the printers were extraordinarily busy.

But the League was only one of the propaganda founts. The W. C. T. U. sent out 50,000,000 pages from national headquarters, in addition to 50,000 song books, 750,000 booklets, 28,000 pamphlets, 32,000 hand-books, 195,000 pamphlets, 250,000 pledge cards and 5000 medal contest reciters. The National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement League issued more than 100,000 copies of an anti-Smith periodical during the campaign. The Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals flooded the country with millions of leaflets giving "the truth about the liquor traffic and its candidate," besides continuing as usual to send its "Clipsheet" to 10,000 newspaper editors and "The Voice" to all Methodist ministers. The Year Book also tells how prohibition education was spread thru seven or eight million copies of Presbyterian periodical literature in 1928 and through various other religious publications.

In ten months, the League reports, it issued 136 press statements and a "very conservative estimate shows that at least 14,688,000,000 inches of newspaper space—much of it on the front page—was obtained by these statements."

Ammunition for prohibition workers was sent out in vast quantities and the research department of the World League Against Alcoholism has catalogued more than 10,000 publications on alcohol and alcoholism, prepared "an enormous number" of statistical tables and has obtained contracts for more than 1200 showings of its own motion picture based on Professor Irving Fisher's book, "Prohibition at Its Worst." There are several prohibition movies available.

The scope of the League's propaganda work as described in the Year Book can only be hinted at in this short space. Great wads of information are on tap for anyone interested in prohibition who applies. Thousands of "temperance" meetings are held, and no one contemplating one need lack for suggested programs, canned speeches and speakers.

It's Just Hard Daily Labor for Cadet Mascot

WEST POINT, N. Y. Sept. 17.—Life isn't all a bed of roses for the Army's mule, far from it. Instead of being the pampered pet of the cadet corps, he pulls a post garbage wagon when not holding forth in his infrequent periods of glory as West Point's football mascot.

Only on the occasion of the Army's biggest games is the monotony of his somewhat lazy existence in the shafts of a refuse cart broken—perhaps not more than half a dozen times in a season. Then he comes into his own as an honored participant in all the color and pageantry for which such contests are noted.

On the day of the game he is relieved of his regular assignment, placed in the hands of a hostler, who shines and sleeks him appropriately and drapes over his back a blanket in Army colors. An extra portion of oats is included.

Whether on trips to far places with the squad or at home then, he prances with a lighter step, his head is held proudly higher. Oftentimes he leads a parade of the corps around the gridiron before the starting whistle. During the game he sometimes is permitted to stand on the sidelines a short while and later to head a parade of victory.

Then, he is lead back to his nameless existence with the garbage wagon, there probably to await in equine anticipation his next call to glory.

The Army has no place for idlers, such as a full-time football mascot, so the mule must earn his keep.

melon had revived old memories: "Dear Mr. Pigg: I was very happily surprised this morning when Senator Robinson and Congressman Parks came to call on the Federal Farm Board and presented us with a watermelon weighing 140 pounds, and added to that happy occasion was the fact that you were the sender of the melon.

"I related to the Board and to your distinguished statement the fact that you were one of the first to send co-operative shipments of livestock to the Producers at St. Louis when we opened that first co-operative agency. It called to mind some of the early problems we had in the co-operative marketing of livestock, and the fact that we had gone quite a way in solving some of those problems and that you had quite a part in helping to bring that about.

"I wanted to write and give you my personal word of appreciation for sending this wonderful melon to the Farm Board. You will be furnished with one of the pictures of the Farm Board, in our board room, with the melon on the table.

"With kindest regards, I am, sincerely yours,

New Exhibits

Exhibit will be to impress upon fair visitors the importance of conserving our timber resources and of reforestation.

The fair management is featuring community exhibits this year and reports from the various communities indicate a larger number of community exhibits than in former years. Entries already assured in this department are Blevins, De Ann, Bodew, Shover Springs, Spring Hill, Columbus. Other entries are expected during the week.

The poultry and livestock departments promise to be the best ever seen at this fair. The management states for exhibit space in the livestock department which indicates that visitors to the Southwest Arkansas Fair will have an opportunity to see some real show heards. Such heards will be entered for educational and publicity purposes and will not compete with local breeders.

In Final Report

The report covered also inquiry into other legislative matters. Concerning revelations made by its investigations in part the report said:

"This grand jury has examined a number of witnesses in its investigation of legislative matters and has returned indictments in two cases.

"Our information has caused us to believe that conditions during the past two sessions of the legislature have been deplorable.

"It is regrettable that the testimony we have received was not sufficiently definite for us to base indictments, but we suggest that the next grand jury carry on the investigation for further developments and uncover, if possible, the nefarious practices of the past two sessions."

The grand jury early in the March term started an investigation into the alleged attempt by Reece Caudle to bribe Senator John M. Quarles to vote for the racing bill, which attempt Quarles made public on the floor of the senate but after which the vote was favorable to the bill, vetoed later by Governor Parnell.

The report to Judge McGehee was signed by C. M. Burrows, foreman, and Thompson Dugan, clerk.

Tennessee To Lose Her Popular Football Coach

KNOXVILLE, Sept. 17.—The University of Tennessee stands to lose a good football coach and West Point, or some other institution of higher learning, gain one.

After the end of the present football season, the assignment of Major Robert Neyland, R. O. T. C. commander at the university and coach of football, will have ended. In fact, he was allowed by the government to remain at the university a year longer than his regular assignment, but if he is to remain with the university after this season, he will doubtless have to resign from government service. Twelve years more in the army would entitle him to retirement with pension.

The possibility that he will continue in the service and accept a coaching position of some sort at West Point is brought up by some, while others believe the coach will go to some eastern university for a fancy figure. He has received several offers.

His Tennessee teams won 22 games, lost two and tied one, in three seasons of play.

FOOTBALL ROAR IN "TIME, PLACE, GIRL"

Beside dialogue of the players, the mighty roar of a football crowd is stirringly captured by Vitaphone in Warner Bros' production, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," directed by Howard Bretherton, which opens at the Saenger Theatre on Wednesday.

Recording such a noise of such volume and intensity has been a pretty problem ever since talking pictures were launched. After endless experiments, the Vitaphone technical staff worked it out.

The swelling crescendo from the howling mob as the football star lengthens his open-field run foot by foot is reproduced with a realism that lends a real thrill to the photographed action. The appeal of the film is greatly enhanced by Joe Howard's appealing music and the songs and dialogue that are heard from the screen. Hough, Adams and Howard wrote the musical comedy of which "The Time, the Place and the girl," is a talking picture version and Robert Lord adapted it for the screen. Grant Withers plays the young football star in this production.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Helen Page feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, Leonard Brent. But he represents all that she knows of home and family and he has promised to clear up the mystery of her birth after she graduates.

However a chance meeting with a dying beggar causes Brent to change all his plans regarding Helen's future. Before the man dies he tells her that his name is Charles Owens Nellin; that his wife is dead and that he has hidden a daughter from a wealthy grandfather, Cyril K. Cunningham, of Yonkers. Posing as a newspaper man searching for story material, Brent secures facts and evidence which aid his plans.

When Helen graduates she reminds her guardian that he has promised to tell her about her parents, and is amazed when he tells her that she is the heiress of Cyril K. Cunningham. He shows her a locket which he had secured from the dying Nellin and tells her the picture is of her mother, Evangeline Cunningham Nellin. In accordance with a promise made to her parents, he tells her that he must now take her to her grandfather. Ob-

Brent smiled too. It was, of course, a stereotyped fortune, but it amused him. The law of averages had worked to make the advice good on this occasion, he told himself.

After lunch they drove up the Hudson and Helen tried to talk of the future—where they would live—what they would do—but Brent was strangely silent.

Helen too fell silent and when they returned to Bramblewood she was conscious that Brent had accepted the change in their plans as being inevitable.

It had a depressing effect upon her and when they again entered Mr. Cunningham's room she experienced a sense of futility. Whatever these two men decided for her would be her fate. She knew it, because she knew she had not the will to stand against Brent. She could not force herself upon him. For in spite of what he had said about his own secret dreams there was his past that she could not weigh. This would keep her from trying to settle the issue herself.

So she said nothing beyond a polite greeting to Mr. Greaves when he was introduced to her.

The lawyer's keen eyes swept her face in one searching glance and he satisfied himself in an instant that whatever she might be she was no common crook.

"I don't see why I should stay here! You haven't accepted me as your granddaughter. Can't I go back to New York and wait?"

taining an interview with Cunningham, Brent introduces Helen as his granddaughter and tells him her story. He is skeptical until he sees a locket which Brent had secured from the dying Nellin. This locket contained a picture of Evangeline Cunningham Nellin which the old man recognizes. Then he asks Brent and Helen to return later to meet his lawyer.

CHAPTER

Brent and Helen lunched in Yonkers, in a cheerful little room where an experimental-minded proprietor was trying out the idea of a gypsy atmosphere, achieved through the medium of a palm-reading fortune teller whose fee was included with the price of the meal.

Helen was at first too excited and apprehensive to take an interest in the woman when she came to their table, but later, after Brent had talked to her, and the woman came back Helen submitted to having her "fortune" told.

She smiled at Brent over her outstretched hand, thinking more of him and his remarkable power to sway her than of the woman who sent a grimy finger tracing the lines of her palm.

A moment ago, little more, she'd been intuitively afraid of the near future—afraid that her grandfather, once convinced of her relation to him, would demand that she give up Brent's guardianship of herself and accept her place in the world as the Cunningham heiress.

Brent had swept aside her fear, declaring that Mr. Cunningham was of too suspicious and crabby a disposition ever to accept the truth. "But even if he did," he added cunningly, "I can't see why you should be unhappy about it, Helen dear. I know you aren't interested in his fortune but if he needs you . . ."

He had let his voice trail off with effective suggestiveness, planting the first seed of sacrifice in Helen's mind.

Before either of them spoke again the gypsy woman returned and Helen tore her thoughts away from Brent to listen to what was told to her.

She smiled over the woman's promise of lots of money and a happy marriage, with a warning to beware of an older man.

South Will Take Lead In Aviation
Dixie Becoming Air-Minded Faster Than Other Sections.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 17.—With in two years, every important center in the south will be tied up in a network of air transportation lines which will carry the mail, express and passengers, is the confident prediction made by A. P. Barrett, president of Southern Air Transport, Inc., in the leading article in the September 15 issue of Southern Aviation.

"The south is certain to be the scene of vast transcontinental aerial activity," says Mr. Barrett, "but it also will serve as the gateway for travel through the air to the great undeveloped markets of Latin America."

"In air-mindedness the south will lead all other sections of the globe because in its mild climate will flourish the thousands of training schools that will be needed to teach the world to fly."

"The possibilities of aviation already have become actualities; and in time, more people will travel through the air 'round the corner' than will travel on the ground. No one questions that it is a speedier means of transportation; and with the element of time saved it already is cheaper."

As proof of the amazing development of aviation, Mr. Barrett points to the aviation interests he heads, which have about 8000 miles of daily schedule in the south and operate a fleet of nearly 100 ships. Without bonuses or special favors this system has constructed more permanent lines of travel and has more ships taking the air than any other single unit in aviation.

Anyway, then plan to start a full year of active work and urge the attendance of every mother with a youngster in this school.

Capital Zee To Have New Reptile Palace

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—A reptile palace, where the world's finest collection of saurian creatures will reside in most modern captive surroundings, is planned for the National Zoological park.

Architectural features of reptile houses in European zoos, recently surveyed in detail by Dr. William M. Mann, director, will be incorporated in the structure, which is scheduled for completion next spring.

A two-fold objective is sought in the design, natural surroundings for the creatures and exhibition to the greatest public advantage.

Dr. Mann emphasized that the house will not only be a home for the reptiles, but a public place in which the visitor will see everything at his greatest comfort and convenience.

Each cage, from that of a tiny snake to the quarters of aged turtles, is planned to be a little world in itself, as complete and natural as conditions will permit.

COULDN'T SLEEP, SO MUCH PAIN

Lady Says She "Hurt Nearly All Over" and "Nerves Were All on Edge."

New Albany, Ind.—"About ten years ago, I was just about run-down," writes Mrs. David Brock, of 1102 West Main St., this city. "My back and limbs ached; in fact, I hurt nearly all over. I had bad, sick headache spells, and my nerves were all to pieces."

"I could not sleep at night; could hardly have any rest at all. I was barely able to get around to do my work. I kept up just because I was a mother with five little children to care for."

"I read about Cardui. I thought it might help me, so I bought a bottle and began to take it."

"It was such a benefit to my health. By the time I had taken the first bottle, I felt so much better. My husband insisted on me giving Cardui a fair trial, so I kept on until I had taken several bottles, and at last found myself a well woman."

Thousands of other women, who had been in a run-down, suffering condition, have reported that after taking Cardui they recovered good health.

Cardui is a safe, effective detergent. 50 cts.

Youth, British Champion and Veteran Furnish Many Thrills at Pebble Beach

Ruffin White Says Plant Fall Crops

Oats, Rye and Vetch Are Worth Real Money To Farmers.

"Oats and rye planted this fall will help in overcoming the feed shortage due to the summer drought" states Ruffin White, a prominent farmer who believes that everyone who milks cows should by all means grow all the feed which they use. According to County Agent Lynn Smith there is, throughout the county, a general shortage of feed crops and to help overcome this shortage oats should be sown for cutting next spring, and rye should be sown for winter and early spring grazing.

The best variety of oats to plant for spring feed include any of the Red Rust Proof type, such as Ferguson, Fulgum, Apples, and Culberson. To insure a good stand of oats the seed bed should be well prepared by plowing, harrowing and disking; then eight pecks of seed should be planted per acre. Where the oats are sown on land which received little or no commercial fertilizer last spring 200 pounds of Superphosphate should be applied broadcast at planting. This fertilizer may not need to be planted on land which is fertile enough to produce a good crop without it however. In the early spring when the coats start to grow 100 pounds of Nitrate of Soda, or its equivalent, should be applied.

Abruzzi Rye is the best variety, but southern or Tennessee may be used. Rozen rye is not recommended for the South. Rye for early spring grazing should be planted the last 10 days in this month if possible. Later planting will greatly reduce the value of the grazing crop. At least a bushel of seed should be planted per acre, and six pecks is really a better amount.

Night Football At Texarkana Now

Junior High Stage First After-Supper Games In State.

TEXARKANA, Sept. 17.—Inauguration of Texarkana Junior College's $3500 night football lighting system in its one-year-old athletic plant, Grim Park stadium, will be held Friday night when the local Bulldogs meet the Monticello A & M Aggie at 8 o'clock.

Large illuminators of 48,000 watts each, erected atop 65-foot cross-topped pine poles, will furnish enough "daylight" for the two teams to play as if it were during the afternoon. Passes can be seen as easily as ever, the punts have proved no harder to catch than under ordinary conditions and spectators get as good a view from the stands.

Affording more fans the privilege of attending due to being played at night, the novelty of the nocturnal game and his curiosity to see it "work" or "flop," the game is expected to bring out the largest crowd yet for a junior college contest.

Johnny Celmars Visits Sandyland and Gets Himself Slapped To Sleep

Battle-Scarred Ring Veteran Takes Chance With Youngster In Dim Light—Bang! He Gets It On the Jaw and Takes A Nap.

As most anybody around here can tell you, Johnny Celmar belongs to the older school of fighters—the school that believes in fighting on the square and giving the fans a run for their money. True, old age is slipping on him. He's not as fast as he once was, nor as light on his feet—but if you should happen to get in front of that left—well, call the night nurse. You're due for a nap.

Now, this Johnny knows a bit about protecting himself and the rosined canvas under the glare of electric lights is where he is at home. Yet last night he had a new experience—one somewhat out of the ordinary—and this morning grins sheepishly when he tells his friends about it.

The South Arkansas Fox Hunter's League will hold its next meeting Thursday, September 19, at Poison Springs, Ouachita county, just below Gurdin. It was announced this morning. The meeting will be called at 5:30 p. m., and members will leave Gurdin for Poison Springs sometime afternoon.

Tom Haynie, of Camden, is president of the league, and another active member is Millard Alford, attorney of Gurdin. In a letter inviting the Editor of The Star to attend, Mr. Alford writes:

"I do not know whether you have ever engaged in the ancient and honorable sport of chasing the King of ivy and discretion or not, but I believe you would thoroughly enjoy it.

"Irving S. Cobb says every section of this country excels in the preparation of certain kinds of foods; that this immediate section of the United States prepares the finest barbecued meats in the world. We will serve you your fill of barbecued goat, lamb, and pork, prepared by a master of his art. You will associate and rub shoulders with the finest bunch of sportsmen in the world, wearing everything from 'stronger than the laws' to silk underwear."

Due to the many open berths and large quantity of material on hand, Woodson is not likely to announce his lineup until the day of the game, although it probably will include: Wallace and Stuart, ends; Henderson and Caler, tackles; Walker and Waters, guards; Davidson, center; Co-Captain Mullin, quarter; Nichols and Gibbons, halves; Co-Captain Connally, fullback.

Texarkana's line will average 175 pounds with the backfield tipping the scales at 165.

Dude Ranchers Hit for Home After Real Year

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Sept. 17—Black winter is settling on the vast stretches of Wyoming, and with the signs of snow, wind and cold, the most colorful residents of the state—the dude ranchers—are packing up their fur bedecked chaps, silver plated spurs, ten gallon hats and are trekking their way to Chicago or New York.

For the dude ranchers don't like the cold and few of them stay through the winter.

Meantime the scores of ranchers who turn their places over to the summer "cowboys and cowgirls," commonly called "dudes," are sadly bidding goodbye to their guests after a record breaking season.

So successful has dude ranching become that many of the ranches have capacity reservations for the 1930 season already on hand, according to Dude Ranchers Association and one of the west's most colorful characters.

In the summer, the office workers, businessmen and women who crave the life of the "great open spaces" come west to live a "rough" life. It is the business of the ranchers to see that the life of these summer visitors is all that it is expected to be.

Camping trips, where the guests must rough it—but not too "roughly"—are provided. Wild horses, but not too wild—must be ridden. Hunting trips with all the thrills and dangers of Theodore Roosevelt's expositions also are provided.

The cattlemen whose vast expanses have provided the beef of a nation, have found that the tourist business pays more than the cattle business, so he has combined the two, and in most cases only a few competent "cowhands" are required to do "herd duty."

The city "dudes" just dote on "riding herd" and even are willing to pay for the privilege.

Bacon Stays With Atwater-Kent Co. Says When Better Radios Are Made He'll Handle Them.

The E. N. Bacon Electric Company, long a fixture in his line in this city, has just renewed his agency contract with the Atwater-Kent radio people, expressing the belief that it is the best radio on the market and the one giving the best service.

"That's why I went back to it," Mr. Bacon said. "During the summer, but with the coming of fall there isn't much doing in radio weather reception will be better and folks will all want a machine. In my years in business here I have tried to handle only the best and that's the reason I renewed my contract with Atwater-Kent. When better radios are built, they will build 'em—and Bacon Electric Co., in Hope, will sell 'em."

Mr. Bacon has just received a shipment of the latest models and has them on display at his place.

Radio Puts Alaska Much Nearer To U. S. Capital

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 17.—(AP)—A summer in Alaskan waters found Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the bureau of fisheries, divorced from his office by many thousands of miles but in constant touch by radio.

The radio is part of the special equipment of the vessel in which he cruised in fishery districts. Through it he kept in contact with canneries, with federal stations, and with Washington.

Radio has become such an integral part of the fishery industry that regulations drawn up in Washington are in effect within 48 hours even in the most remote points of Alaskan fishing areas.

Short wave sets have been used by several companies for communication between plants and Seattle headquarters and the federal radio commission has been urged to request to allow more organizations the privilege of establishing wireless connections.

The commission has taken the stand that it would be illegal to grant air rights to any corporation for private use and all radio messages from Alaska canneries to mainland cities are transmitted by a combination of radio, cable and telegraph.

Radio has placed itself solidly with fisher folks from the rocky mound coast of Gloucester to Alaska's chill waters. Prices, weather forecasts best markets for catches, and areas in which largest hauls are being made are broadcast and many fishing communities radio to the vessels information regarding the families of the fishermen.

Fishing dories are called back to the mother ship, or guided in different directions over fishing grounds by radio. In some cases, where dories have strayed from the fleet, word is radioed to all ships to keep a sharp lookout and many lives have been saved.

PERSONAL MENTION

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet Thursday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. P. Agee, on East Second street.

Miss Mary Simmons, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at a local hospital yesterday, is reported resting easily this morning, which will be pleasant news to this charming young lady's many friends.

Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Womack, of Arkadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Norwood, of Little Rock, were visitors to Hope Sunday evening, attending the services at the Methodist church. Dr. Womack is head of Henderson State Teachers, College.

He has been staying home, all knocked out with a full-fledged case of "flu." That is, Louie says it is flu, but the fellows think he just wanted a vacation. He threatens to be back on the job soon, which may add strength to his statement he really was ill.

Special Indian Radio Service Planned By Oklahoma Station

ENID, Okla., Sept. 17.—(AP)—The Indian has not steeped into the radio picture.

A broadcasting enterprise, designed especially to benefit the Indians of the southwest and said to be the first of its kind, has been outlined to the federal radio commission by representatives of Station KGCR, Enid, Okla.

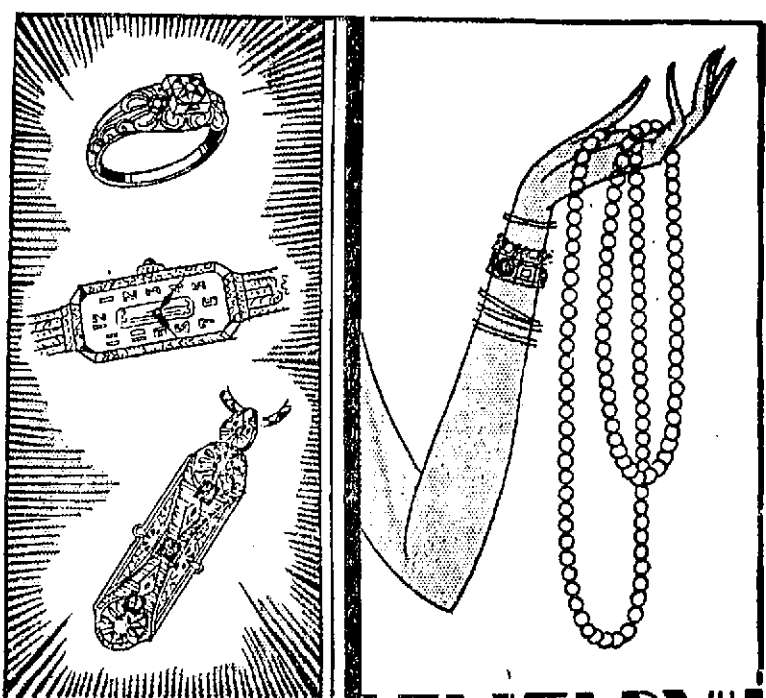

The purpose is to present the real history and culture of the first Americans and to assist him in the problems of modern living. William Wilkerson, full blood Cherokee and radio singer and lecturer, told the commission that the programs would not deal with the fabled red man.

Mount Pleasant Milk Plant Soon

Town Realizes Worth of Milk As Town-Building Product.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas, Sept. 17.—The contract is to be awarded soon for Mount Pleasant's milk plant, to be known as the Texas Milk Products Company, headquarters of which are maintained in Marshall. The plant, it is expected, will be ready for operation early next year.

Three years ago a movement was inaugurated to establish a cheese factory in Mount Pleasant. This did not materialize, but it did furnish the inspiration to a great extent, for what has culminated in a project that will soon make Northeast Texas, with Mount Pleasant, as the radiating center, a dairy section of vast proportions.

Survey in Wisconsin

In December of last year Secretary Pickett of the local commercial organization was sent to Wisconsin, to make a survey of the dairy situation. What he saw and what he was told convinced him that a plant using whole milk was the industry that would best serve the needs of Titus county, and he so recommended.

Titus county has not jumped into the dairying game; it has grown into it, and this has been done through a three-year stage of development. First there was agitation of the suggestion of more feed production, followed by a campaign for more and better cattle and then a general campaign of education as to the value of dairying and what it means to the prosperity and contentment of the people.

Better dairy cattle have been brought into Titus county as a result of the formation of the Titus County Dairy Finance association with A. C. Hoffmann, president, and Sam Williams, secretary. Mr. Hoffmann, incidentally, is the largest shareholder in the Mount Pleasant plant of the Texas Milk Products Company, having subscribed for $10,000 worth of stock. The association is composed of thirty of Mount Pleasant's leading business men, who underwrite $15,000 worth of paper, to be used in the purchase of good, high-producing dairy cattle. This movement has already brought into the county thirty-five registered Jersey heifers and six pedigreed bulls, all from some of the best stocked dairy farms in Tennessee.

Relief for Farmers

Three years ago Mount Pleasant Chamber of Commerce directors determined that the time was ripe to afford relief from the all-cotton method of farming. Various ways and means were given consideration, but the one method that offered most feasible, and, at the same time, seemed likely to prove the greatest revenue producer, in addition to being that which the farmers responded to most unanimously, was dairying. There has been no setback, no cessation of effort, from that period to date. Dairying has been fostered fifty-two weeks in the year, and the point has been reached where, in a comparatively short time, with conditions as they are at present, it will be the major industry of Titus county, and, in all likelihood, throughout all of Northeast Texas.

That Mount Pleasant's achievements as to the dairy industry have not gone unnoticed is demonstrated in a letter received by Secretary Pickett from General Manager W. N. Blanton of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce. In commending the Mount Pleasant Chamber of Commerce, for the success attained in securing a milk plant, Mr. Blanton said:

"It is nothing short of wonderful to think a city the size of Mount Pleasant can raise $500,000 for a milk plant. I realize you are getting assistance from the other towns, but it is Mount Pleasant that is carrying the load and taking the leadership."
